Included in these sites are colonial-era burial grounds and gravestones. They are outdoor museums, enhancing the city and helping to tell the story of the people who lived here. This presentation will focus on burial sites that reflect the people and society of colonial Newport. Although Newport was a diverse community, burial practices were remarkable alike. Find out about the sites and the carvers who crafted the gravestones. The Stevens family of Newport were important stone carvers and will be a focus of the presentation. Lew Keen has served on the state cemetery commission and is chair of the Newport Historic Cemetery Advisory Commission. He has documented graves in Newport for the state database and is the author of A Guide to Historic Burial Grounds in Newport, published by History Press in 2021. April 24	Wednesday	6:30PM	Cranston	Presentation - Cranston Central Library- 140 Sockanosset Cross Rd, Cranston, RI 02920- “Living with the Dead in Rhode Island: From Cemetery Destruction to Cemetery Preservation” -State Archaeologist Charlotte Taylor presents a talk on Rhode Island cemetery law. Before 1990, it wasn't safe to be dead in Rhode Island. Although the destruction of graves has been a felony in Rhode Island since 1896, this did not stop property developers and road builders from destroying cemeteries that got in the way of their plans, including the burial places of Native Americans some thousands of years old. It did not stop antiquarians and curious property owners from digging up bodies. Explore this dark history and today's era of stronger laws and more engaged advocacy for Rhode Islanders who can no longer speak for themselves. Charlotte will present both atrocities and stories of successful, respectful preservation, drawing on her experiences as one of the first people who is called when (old) skeletal remains are found.

May 2	Thursday	2pm to 3pm	Newport	Presentation- Gilded Age Graves in Newport Presentation - Edward King House - reservations- https://lp.constantcontactpages.com/ev/reg/mavrqeijlp/d1f15b4a-3519-45d5-be59-62b62fbbe998 The city of Newport was the playground of Gilded Age Americans who built the “cottages” that stand today and provide a glimpse of the places they lived. When death arrived, Island Cemetery became “the place” to be buried. The cemetery is the final resting place of ordinary people to world famous individuals. While many buried here were part of the year-round Newport community, a surprising number of summer visitors chose Newport as their place for eternal rest. Members of Mrs. Astors 400, explorers, civil rights leaders, architects, politicians and military heroes are among the people discussed in the presentation. The cemetery has a rich variety of sculptured monuments, some designed by noted architects. The presentation will include grave markers that reflect both the wealth and style of the time. -Lew Keen has served as a state cemetery commissioner and chair of the Newport Historic Cemetery Advisory Commission since 2016. He has documented graves in Newport for the state database and is a co-author of Discover Island Cemetery: Notable People and Monuments from the Gilded Age to Modern Times .
